for the practical use of error correcting codes on communications channels very good long constructive codes are necessary the 60 30 symmetry code over the field of three elements is a long code that has been determined to have the greatest error correcting properties for a code of length 60 with 30 information symbols over the field of three elements the 60 30 symmetry code has more than 10 to the 14th power messages so that determining its weight distribution is a formidable task in actual use of the code knowledge of the weight distribution is valuable because the weight distribution is required for calculation of the probability of decoding error and failure in this paper the weight distribution of the 60 30 symmetry code is given in connection with this weight distribution the parameters of some new 5 designs are determined a conjecture about the entire family of symmetry codes is investigated author
